

Who was Hans Rott?

Hans Rott (1858 - 1884) was a Viennese visionary composer whose short life ended at the age of 25 in a lunatic asylum. He was the favourite student of his organ teacher Anton Bruckner and a fellow student of Gustav Mahler – both recognized his outstanding talent already then.

Rott's Symphony No. 1 in E major, his most famous work, has been attracting a constantly growing circle of admirers from Europe to America and Asia since its rediscovery in 1989. Meanwhile there are several CD recordings available.

Since then, almost all of his compositions for orchestra, vocal and chamber music have had their world premiere and have been published; some of them are already available on CD.
